(c) Different market structures exist in the New Zealand dairy industry. These are: the New Zealand dairy farming industry, the New Zealand milk processing industry, and the New Zealand supermarket industry.

Evaluate the extent to which these market structures affect the allocative efficiency of the New Zealand market for milk and milk products, and the impact that this has on New Zealand consumers, suppliers, and supermarkets.

Refer to Resources A–E, your analysis in parts (a) and (b), and your knowledge of microeconomic theory, in making this evaluation. Use appropriate diagrams/models in your answer.

Use the space below to plan your essay. This plan will not be marked.
